

"If a thing is free to be good it is also free to be bad. And free will is what has made evil possible. Why, then, did God give them free will? Because free will, though it makes evil possible, is also the only thing that makes possible any love or goodness or joy worth having. A world of automata, of creatures that worked like machines, would hardly be worth creating." C.S. Lewis, Mere Christianity.¹

Free Will

Everything in the universe and throughout the cosmos is subject to Universal Laws.² Free Will however, is not a universal law. The nature or inclination of a just and fair universe suggests that you must be given a choice, or the opportunity to choose, in order to express your free will. If we follow that logic, no matter what type of entity or being you encounter, it needs your permission at some level to interact with you. That's if they are playing a "just and fair game." I have worked with clients who have been part of some dramatic experimentation and believed things were happening against their will, only to find that some agreement had been made, at some time in the past. Of course, there are instances when consent is not given and interaction occurs without agreement or permission. Believe it or not, when we dig deep enough we often find an agreement in some form, albeit an obscure one. Stop and think about that for a moment. It is your right that you must give your permission or consent. Sounds strange I know. Why would anyone invite interferences into their life? Why would anyone agree to be part of the abduction phenomenon? Why would anyone agree to experience poverty, violence or disease?

One reason is that you possibly made an agreement many lifetimes ago and until you rescind that agreement, it may continue for eternity. Most often, agreements are made before incarnating into this life. After all, do we not enter into this life with a plan? Everyone has the right to choose. You choose your parents, the experiences you want to create and most everything else that goes with a human life contract. Having made the choice, Universal Laws will bring to you the consequences, the vibration of that choice, the cause and effect of that choice, all cycling through time and space.

This is a key aspect we all need to understand. Most everything that you experience in life is due to the choices you make. That's the key to human existence we are not told about. If you feel out of control, it's because you have given that control to someone or something else, albeit unknowingly through some form of agreement of entrapment. Once again, the Universal Laws come into play to support your choice. Whoever or whatever is controlling you, is still governed by Universal Laws, but not necessarily adhering to the ethic of free will. Agreements of entrapment are very common and play a big role in the human existence. Fortunately, these agreements of entrapment can be cancelled when you understand the rules of the game.
